

ANTIOCH PALACE WILL REMAIN OPEN

FOTH CONFIRMS RUMORS OF HOTEL BUILDING PROJECT

Attorney-in-Fact Says Plans for New Hotel Are Near Complete

LAUNDRY PROPERTY INVOLVED

Rumors, to the effect that plans were being matured for the erection of a new hotel on the site of the Morley real estate office, were confirmed today by Clarence D. Foth, attorney-in-fact for the proposed Chain O' Lakes Laundry & Dry Cleaning company, who stated that negotiations have been under way for some time and that he expected his representative to have all arrangements for financing the project completed within a short time.

"My understanding is that, according to present plans, the hotel will cover the entire front of the lot and back to the depth of 100 or 125 feet," Mr. Foth said. "There will be two stories in front, and these will be leased for long terms. The lease on one of these will be by a chain drug company. The main floor will consist of an office, lobby, restaurant, and coffee shop. There will be 100 rooms, single or in suites, a grand dining room and a roof garden. On the roof garden music will be provided for diners, and the stage will be so constructed that it will permit the holding of boxing contests."

Mr. Foth stated that his representative had discussed the boxing feature with Richard Macek, proprietor of the Antioch Palace, and announced that suitable arrangements could be made to prevent interference with the weekly shows at the Palace.

The real estate involved in the project was purchased recently by the laundry company from Morley.

VILLAGERS FLOCK TO COOLING LAKES NEAR ANTIOCH

Oak Park and River Forest
Send Many Vacationists to Land of Lakes

By Neil Hurley

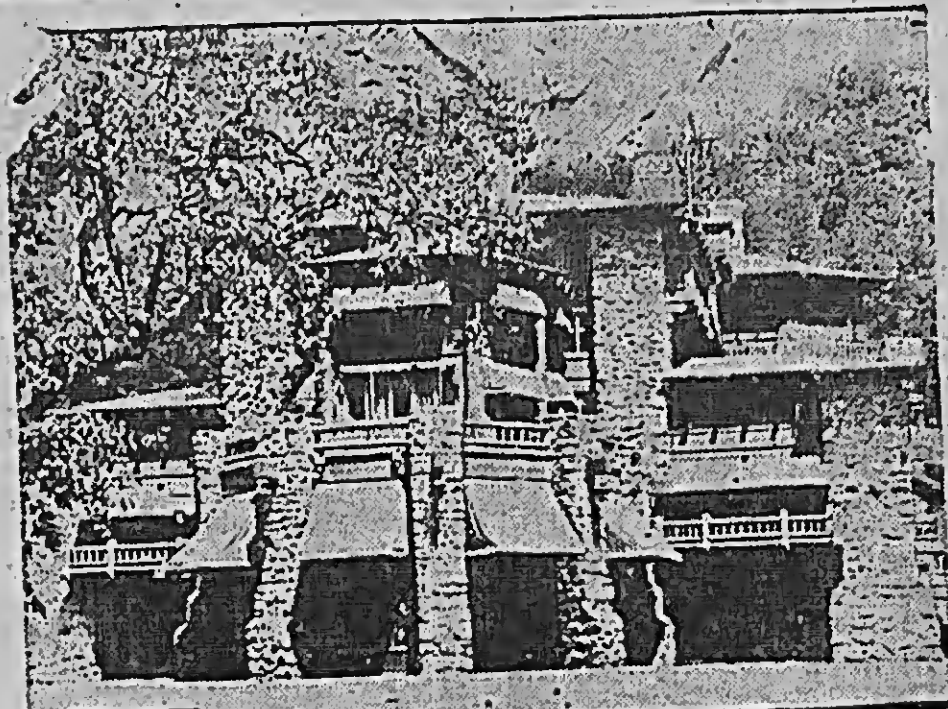

(The following story, interesting to chain of lakes people because it presents the view of the stranger in our midst, is from the pen of Neil Hurley, newspaper writer and athletic director of St. Joseph's camp for Boys at Petite Lake. The article was printed in the Oak Park, June 27, 1930.)

Antioch, according to a green and white advertising booklet, is the headquarters of the "Land of Happy Vacations." Apparently this opinion is shared by a great many Oak Park and River Forest persons who literally flock to the proverbial coolness of the Chain O' Lakes. In fact I am told by Ira M. Simons, proprietor of the Yellow Cab concession and owner of the only two vehicles in town with the insignia, that at least a thousand residents of the twin villages spend all or part of their summer months at one or another of the lakes.

In order to reach Antioch merely follow the River road through Des Plaines township onto Milwaukee avenue and route 21, which will take you direct to your destination, passing through the towns of Wheeling, Half Day, Libertyville, Grayslake, and Lake Villa. Barring detours, which usually impede progress over this route, the time for the trip should range between an hour and fifteen minutes to one and one-third quarters hours. The distance is fifty miles.

In the way of recreations the Chain O' Lakes region offers swimming, golfing, riding, dancing, boating and fishing. The swimming in most lakes is good. We recommend Channel, Merle, Fox and Cathlamet as among the best, realizing that we are leaving out some very excellent, other places. There are eight golf courses; four of which are excellent, and the others all are very playable. Dancing is held nightly at the (Continued on back page)

Stratton Pays Interest Into State Treasury

Secretary of State, William J. Stratton's office during April, May and June, earned $3,379.35 in interest on moneys collected. This amount was paid into the State Treasurer today with an itemized statement showing the amount of interest earned during the quarterly period on each account in each bank.

MAYOR TO SHOOT FIRST GOLF BALL ON MIDGET COURSE

George B. Bartlett Will Formally Open Putt-Putt
Course Tonight

When the Putt-Putt miniature golf course is opened tonight on the Rosalind and Wedge lot just south of the postoffice block, Mayor George B. Bartlett will be accorded the honor of shooting the first ball, according to announcement made today by Mrs. Esther Gibson who has had the course just completed. Whether or not the Mayor will select an opponent and engage in a contest over the 18 hole course, or just officiate with the opening shot was not stated.

Mrs. Gibson also owns and operates a similar miniature course on Grand avenue in Fox Lake, which was opened recently.

Midget, or Tom Thumb golf is taking the country by storm, to judge from the many courses opened recently throughout the country.

Mrs. Gibson's course here is the second opened in Antioch within the last ten days, the first being the course opened in Antioch Hills, south Main street.

LARRY LEVETTE, FORMER BOXER AT PALACE, TO RETURN

Famed Mitt Slinger Expects to Return to Waukegan
This Week

Word was received Tuesday from Larry Levette, former boxer at the Antioch Palace, that he hoped to return from Florida this week. This will be well-received by hundreds of amateur boxing enthusiasts in Lake county, especially in Antioch and Waukegan, as Levette's fights at the Antioch Palace and other nearby arenas will long be remembered by his many backers. He met and defeated some of the best fighters in the game and often lacked punches who out-weighted him considerably.

Fred Terlap received a letter from him Monday in which he stated that he expected to leave Sanford, Flor.

CHARLES ALVERS IS VICTIM OF STICK-UP

Five Armed Men Get Away
With Money, Cigars, and Candy

Charles Alvers, attendant at the Alvers Service Station at the State line, was the victim of a daring hold-up at 10:30 Saturday night, when five armed men possessed themselves of $45, and helped themselves to candy, cigarettes, and cigars.

They Asked for Gas

When the five men drove up, while Charles filled the tank, two of the men went inside, presumably to get some cigarettes. When Charles asked the driver for money for the gas, the driver told him to go inside and get it from the two who had gone in. One of the two men found himself confronted with guns. The men demanded to know where he kept the money, and after securing it, and whatever else fancy dictated, they departed.

DEEP LAKE VICTIM'S BODY IS RECOVERED

Find Corpse of Pat O'Shea
After Frantic Search of 27 Hours

The body of Patrick O'Shea, 23 year old Chicago man drowned July 4 in the waters of Deep Lake, was recovered at 4:15 o'clock Saturday afternoon by Fred W. Bohn and Jos. Holm, both of Chicago, who had been dragging the lake for the body.

The inquest into the death was held by Acting Coroner Maurice J. Peany, at Antioch, the coroner's verdict being that of death by accidental drowning.

O'Shea was drowned shortly after one o'clock Friday afternoon when he fell from a boat into the lake. Ruth Moran, Helen LaRouche, Geo. Snider and Walter Mehrholz, all of Chicago, riding with O'Shea in the boat, believed him to be giving them a scare, but when his body failed to appear they started a search which lasted twenty-seven hours.

After the body was recovered Saturday, it was removed to Strang's undertaking parlor, Antioch, where the inquest was held.

O'Shea is survived by his father, John O'Shea, two sisters, Marguerite and Katherine, and one brother, Daniel. His father and two sisters stood on the bank when the young man fell into the water, and watched the search for his body.

Ida, where he has been boxing on amateur cards, this week, and if he does, he will be in Waukegan before the end of the week. He intends to make his home at Waukegan during the remainder of the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Moore and family and Roy Twing motored to their homes in Galva and Kewanee, Illinois, for a visit over the 4th of July. Bobby Moore stayed for an extended visit with his grandparents.

SALES RECORDS ARE SHATTERED HERE SATURDAY

Volume of Retail Business
Reported to Be Greatest in History

All previous records for retail merchandising were shattered here last Saturday when Antioch merchants had the greatest single day's business in the history of the town. From early morning until late at night merchants and their sales forces were kept on the jump, stocks were depleted or utterly exhausted, calls for extra clerks, and the dispatching of fast trucks for additional merchandise were common occurrences throughout the day.

The greatest rush of business was experienced by the food supply stores and in general the service type of business. While these were cashing in from one of the largest throngs ever seen here on a holiday, a few store proprietors were reluctant to state without making an accurate checkup whether or not their sales over the holiday had exceeded that of their regular summer week-end trade.

Greatest Day in History

"The volume of our sales last Saturday exceeded that of any other single day in the history of our business by more than 25 per cent," Frank R. King of King's drug store told a representative of the News.

One food supply dealer declared that his sales Saturday were double those of any other day since he opened his store here several years ago.

It is admitted that spending was not done so freely as in former years, because of widespread unemployment, and scarcity of cash, and the merchants who fared well here during the week did so because the crowd was here and by sheer numbers the sales totals mounted to unprecedented heights.

Hotels and rooming places were filled to overflowing and resort owners had little cause for complaint of small patronage.

Traffic was congested, but was orderly, and but a few minor accidents were reported in this locality.

TIMELY TOPICS BY ANTIOCH PEOPLE

By REV. PHILLIP BOHI

WHAT ARE YOU WORTH? ...

Two men were going to their work on a certain morning and as they walked past the beautiful palatial home of a man they knew, the subject of their conversation was the owner of this home. He had been ill for only a short time and had died the night before. One said to the other, "Do you know what he was worth?" to which the other replied, "I don't know what he was worth, but he left all he had." There is certainly a volume of truth in this short reply.

The measurement of how much we are worth is usually thought of in the terms of dollars and cents. Yet are there not other aspects relative to our worth which are not less significant? It has been said that the basis of bulk Goliath, the giant, was worth more than David. But that is not the method by which we measure the worth of a man. What are you worth economically, $2.00 per day or a $100,000 per year? A certain gentleman was asked why he did not run for the mayorship of Chicago, and replied that he could not afford to because his present salary was $40,000 per year. The business world considered him of greater worth than we consider the worth of our president of the United States based upon the salaries paid. What worth?

are you worth to your family? A meal ticket, your life insurance, or a good name? What are you worth to your community? Just your poll-tax, or your service and co-operation in the various enterprises that effect the community as a whole as well as yourself? What are you worth to your church? A name on the record, a begrudging subscription annually, or a pure life and an enthusiastic booster in all your church undertakings? What are you worth to your neighbor? To love your neighbor means to be neighborly. What are you worth to yourself? Are you a hindrance and an obstacle to that which you know to be the highest and best for yourself? What you are and where you are today is the product of what you have done for yourself in the past. If you are handicapped today because of lack of education perhaps it is your own fault. Your failure to grasp every opportunity for self development has made you worth less to yourself than you might have been. And finally, what are you worth to God? You have doubtless frequently asked God to do for you, but what have you done for Him? You may say that you have faith in God, but does God have faith in you? He has never failed you, but how about your faithing Him? Measured from these various points of view, what are you worth?

Grayslake Dramatic Club Will Present Play, Tues. Night

The Dramatic club of the Grayslake Methodist church will present the play entitled, "The Mysterious Stranger," on Tuesday evening, July 15, at the High School Auditorium in Antioch. The play is given under the auspices of the Epworth League of the Antioch Methodist church. "The Mysterious Stranger" is a four-act mystery drama, written by Hugh S. McKewen, who is at present the pastor of the Grayslake Methodist church. A cast of nine players appear in the various scenes of the play. "The Mysterious Stranger" has the reputation of being thrilling, romantic, humorous and weird. The admission will be 35c and 50c. Remember, the time is 8 o'clock, (standard time) the place is at the Antioch High School Auditorium, and the date is Tuesday, July 15.

MAN DIES REPAIRING BOAT AT CHANNEL L.

Heart Attack Causes Death
of A. G. Landgras Last Sunday

The life of Anthony G. Landgras, 40, of 647 Melrose avenue, Chicago, was taken Sunday afternoon while repairing a sheared motor-boat in an outboard motor boat. He died suddenly at 5 o'clock of heart attack, caused by excessive heat and over-exertion in attempting to start the engine of his motor-boat.

Although warned to avoid any heavy work because of a heart weakness of some 15 years standing, Landgras, in company with several friends, went motor boating on Channel lake Sunday. He and a friend, William G. Guttenberger, of Chicago were driving the outboard motor boat, when the motor suddenly stopped, almost in the center of the lake. The two men, in spite of the heat repaired the broken motor-boat. Landgras pulled the rope used to start the motor, two or three times. As they started to return to shore, he complained of his heart paining him, and then, Guttenberger testified at the inquest, the man collapsed, falling to the bottom of the boat. Guttenberger was forced to hold him with one hand while he used the other to guide the racing boat to the landing.

After beaching the boat, Guttenberger carried the body ashore, and called Dr. H. F. Beebe who pronounced the man dead. The body was removed to Chicago Sunday night. Landgras is survived by his wife and several children.

FINANCIAL TANGLE IS NEAR SOLUTION FOLLOWING MEETING

Form Plan to Save $200,000
Investment in Amusement Auditorium

BOXING SHOW FRIDAY NIGHT

Solution of the financial problems that for the last several months have hovered over the Antioch Palace, clouding the $200,000 de luxe amusement place in a maze of uncertainty, seemed near late yesterday following a conference of creditors that lasted far into the night.

Today the cloud is lifted and continued operation of the Palace is assured, according to those who sat in the conference last night, which was only one of the long drawn out sessions to devise some plan to keep the place operating and save the large cash investment of Richard Macek, builder of the Palace, and his creditors.

Briefly, the plan concerns the formation of a company, to be incorporated with Mr. Macek, C. K. Anderson, who holds the real estate mortgage, and other creditors as incorporators. This plan was agreed to, it was announced today.

The financial difficulty was precipitated last December when the Herbert H. Davis company, sheet metal contractors, of Chicago, filed a lien on the property to protect their account for the installation of a heating plant and ventilating system in the Palace. C. K. Anderson as chief local creditor and holder of the real estate mortgage, in retaliation of the move on the part of the Chicago firm, filed foreclosure proceedings through his attorneys, Rosyard & Behanna. A suit ensued, the legal point being proof of priority. Appointed by the court, Lee Dalley, Waukegan realtor, was instructed to take charge as receiver, but from some cause failed to do so, and Macek continuing to operate, was cited for contempt and ordered to pay rent on the property.

Anderson Happy Over Plan
"There has been a big misunderstanding," Chas. K. Anderson told a representative of the Antioch News over the telephone from his Chicago offices today. "I have always been willing to accept any plan that is fair and just to all creditors," he said.

Having other large interests, Mr. Anderson has left his affairs here in the hands of his attorneys who have been acting in strict accordance with the provisions of the law in such cases. Today Mr. Anderson seemed elated over the fact that a tentative solution to the problem had been reached.

Palace to Remain Open
Richard Macek, who has been facing the possible loss of his life's savings and utter financial ruin, seemed bright and happy today for the first time in months.

"It's the only thing that could be done, and I'm glad to accept the plan," Macek said. "Now we'll have the boxing show tomorrow night."

The boxing shows will be held every Friday night, which certainly will be good news to fans throughout Lake county. There will be dancing Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday nights until Labor day, Mr. Macek announced today.

Clyde Wentworth has leased his "Cupboard" to Bert Bown.
Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Webb of Kansas City, visited at the home of his uncle, Chas. Webb, Saturday night.

The Formation of Coal

When we burn wood in such a manner that little air gets to it, we have an almost all-carbon product—charcoal. Exactly in this way did mother nature produce our coal. Millions of years' accumulations of leaves and vegetable matter and the resulting weight, together with the earth's heat, turned this matter into coal. However, more gas is retained in coal than in charcoal.

A FRIEND IN NEED

How many of us have ever thought that how good a town Antioch is depends much on how much insurance we carry and how much insurance our neighbor carries?

The Community Message carried this week on another page of the paper brings it out in a brief but effective way. "A Friend in Need" is what we all want, and those of us who have been unfortunate enough to collect on a protective insurance policy realize that insurance is certainly, that.

What the rate of increase in the amount of insurance carried by the American public in the last ten years has been in evidence of the increasing importance of insurance in family life today. It is also an evidence of the increasingly large number of ways in which insurance has become of value, and almost a necessity to all of us. We can insure almost anything we wish to insure today. There is not only insurance against death, sickness, accident, or property damage of any kind, not only insurance against our automobile being damaged or damaging other cars or people, but insurance against our being able to pay for our homes as we plan to pay for them. Insurance against our children being able to go to college when they are ready to go to college; insurance against an income for ourselves, that is, a provision for a certain definite income beginning at a certain definite age; all these and many other kinds are available.

Truly, to be properly insured is an obligation which we owe our fellow-townsmen.

And while the average amount of insurance carried by the average citizen all over the country is rapidly increasing, still the amount per capita is numbered in dollars and tens of dollars rather than hundreds and thousands of dollars.

Insurance is just another way in which we can better our own personal conditions, our own family conditions, and beyond them, our community conditions. It is, as we can see, not only a personal problem, but a community problem. Let's consider it as such, thinking first of all, of course, of our own personal needs and our own personal advantage, but keeping in mind that bettering these means bettering our community at the same time.

31,000 LIVES—$850,000.00

J. H. Parmelee, of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, estimates that motor vehicle accidents in the United States during the past year resulted in an economic loss of $850,000,000. This is the price we pay for carelessness and incompetence. Yet it is the least important phase of the problem. Of infinitely greater importance is the fact that in 1929 the automobile claimed about 31,000 lives.

Every year hundreds of thousands of new automobiles throng the highways. Utilization of the average car is continually on the increase. Traffic congestion grows more severe. Speed ranges rise. Yet, for the most part, we are attempting to handle these conditions with outmoded laws.

It has been stated that the greatest single accident prevention need is a driver's licensing law. So far 17 states have passed such ordinances. In the other 31, persons are allowed to operate high-powered vehicles on public roads irrespective of their competence, thus endangering all motorists and pedestrians.

It is too late to save the 31,000 lives that were lost last year, and the 28,000 the year before. We cannot replace the wasted $850,000,000. But we can halt the rising death and injury toll caused by reckless and incompetent drivers.

LAKE VILLA MAN WEDS GIRLS FROM WAUKEGAN

Ladies' Aid Society Plans Sale of Fancy Sewing Wed., July 16

An unusually pretty wedding ceremony was witnessed when Miss Madeline Nauta of Waukegan became the bride of Lester C. Hamlin, at the St. Joseph's church in Waukegan last Saturday morning.

Miss Katherine Nauta was bride's maid and Gordon Hamlin served his brother as best man. The bride was lovely in pale pink chiffon with picture hat to match. She carried a bouquet of cream roses and baby's breath. The bridesmaid wore green chiffon and carried a bouquet of yellow roses and baby's breath. A breakfast for the immediate relatives followed the ceremony and was served at the bride's home. After a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls, the young couple will begin housekeeping in the Leonard cottage. The bride has been in the employ of the North Shore Co. for the past six years and has many friends in Waukegan. Mr. Hamlin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Hamlin and is in the employ of Paul Avery.

The Ladies' Aid society are very busy getting ready for their annual summer sale of fancy work, aprons, quilts, rugs, and novelties, which they will hold at the church grounds on Wednesday, July 16, beginning at one o'clock, daylight saving time. A cafeteria supper will be served in connection with the sale.

Rev. and Mrs. Brand and daughter of Ingleside were guests of the Alspaugh family at the parsonage Sunday.

Mrs. Chas. Jarvis returned last week from the Chicago hospital and is improving in health.

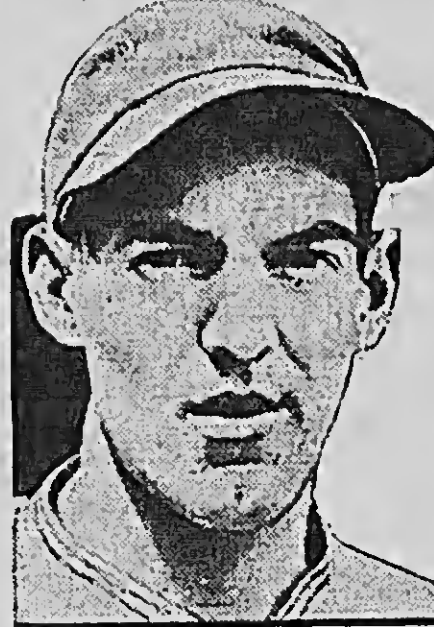

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hamlin, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nader with Pauline and Ellen, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nader started Thursday for Westfield, Wis., to spend the next three or four days at Wood Lake there. They were joined by N. Mohar and friend of Bloomington, and relatives of Mrs. Henry Nader, which made a party of fourteen. Mr. Fred Hamlin was ill while there and was not able to return until the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. James Atwell went to Maywood last week to spend a few days with the Glosier family there. The Bowman family of Chicago

English Becomes Power

Woody English, youngest player on Joe McCarthy's champion Cubs, who has become the big power of the infield since injury took Rogers Hornsby out of the game. This season English has developed into one of the great infielders in the major leagues. Since being moved from short to third he has stood out. Although still new to the position, he ranks with the best of them on the hot corner. And he's hitting as he never did before and as no one thought he ever would.

BRISTOL FARMER IS BADLY HURT WHILE UNLOADING HAY SAT.

Meade Walker is Camping With Kenosha Scouts at O-Da-Ho-Ta

Charles Gillmore met with a severe accident Saturday at the Gillmore Bros. farm in South Bristol. While unloading hay, the hay fork gave way at an unexpected moment and he fell a considerable distance, striking one of Mr. Gillmore's feet. His entire body soon became swollen as a result. A serum was administered as a precaution against lock-jaw. He is still in a serious condition.

Meade Walker is camping for two weeks with the Kenosha Boy's Scout Band at O-Da-Ko-Ta camp. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wilker and the Edward Stratton family went out to hear a camp concert last Sunday afternoon.

A family 4th of July picnic was held at the W. C. Crosby cottage at Paddocks Lake. These in attendance were: Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Gethen, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burden, Rockford, Ill.; the Carl Ketter family, Milwaukee; the Charles Rockwell family, Kenosha, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gethen, Bristol. The visitors returned home Sunday after spending the weekend at the Gethen and Crosby homes.

Little Emma Castle met with a serious accident while turning a body spring. Her arm was twisted and both bones in one arm were splintered so badly that an operation will be necessary in order to set it.

The Bristol Epworth Leaguers are planning to give a social on the Parsonage lawn, Wednesday evening, July 16. A variety of refreshments will be for sale. A free program will be furnished, commencing at 8:00 o'clock.

Next Sunday evening, July 13, the Epworth League will give a special program beginning at 7:00 o'clock.

At 8 o'clock Sunday evening there will be a special musical program given in the M. E. church, arranged by Rev. C. A. Tuttle.

Everybody had a good time at the Legion festival.

Even the hard-bolted boss of the ferri wheel had the gloom chased from his map a few times. And that's something.

Do you suppose Jim Stearns knows how many people were looking on when he ventured a ride on the merry-go-round at 11 o'clock Saturday night? Suppose the fire siren had sounded right in the midst of Jim's enjoyment?

Commander Horan of the local Legion post began to appear a trifle weary toward the end of the show, the climax of several weeks' hard labor. Who wouldn't? But Horan and the Legionnaires put it over, didn't they? And how!

Even old General Public got warmed up to the festival. Some were heard to remark that an amusement park as an all-summer proposition could be operated at a profit. Why not?—people gather where there is something doing.

Add to the list of those who make friends for Antioch the name of Marshal John Bregan. John looks the part of an officer, and his smiling face and friendly manner inspire confidence instantly. He is a surprise to the average motorist, a pleasant relief from "Where th'll you thak yur goin'" type of officer, and who shall say his genial methods are not 100 per cent more effective?

Wonder if Antioch merchants appreciate Bregan. It's dollars in the till to have the friendly and hospitable spirit promulgated, and Officer Bregan is the chief promulgator and host in behalf of Antioch.

Some of Antioch's street orators ought to demand fair pay. A Spanish expert gets $1,000 for just stabling the bull.

HintsSELF-
CONSCIOUSNESSBy THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Pope, it was, who is responsible for the statement that "the proper study of mankind is man." But he might have continued with the statement that too much attention to one's self, too much study of one's own feelings and moods and personal situations, is quite unprofitable. Self-consciousness is one of the greatest hindrances to self-possession. So long as one's attention is centered upon one's self, one is likely to be ill at ease and unhappy.

I bought a watch for myself when I was seventeen—a large silver watch with a heavy gold-plated chain and a locket dangling from it as it stretched across my vest front. As I walked across the street from the barber shop to the post office my new possession grew in importance in my mind. The chain looked up like a log chain. I was not a little uncomfortable, for I felt sure that everyone I met was dazzled by the glitter of my new decoration, and otherwise strongly impressed by it.

Now, of course, the facts were that no one noticed either me or the gold chain. Each of the people I met was too much taken up with his own concerns to pay any attention to an awkward country lad 'dangling a gold-plated locket from a tawdry chain. Such things were too common, anyway, to attract any special attention.

I suffered a good deal of real pain as a ten-year-old because mother sent me to Sunday school with a little patch on the knee of my trousers. It was a very small patch and it was very neatly put in, but the memory of it today gives me a queer sensation. I put my little hands over my knee in an attempt to cover up the disgraceful patch, but for all of that I was sure that Edith Corliss, who sat next to me in Sunday school, saw the badge of my poverty and scorned me for it. Now I am quite certain that she was thinking only of her yellow curls and her dainty lace-trimmed dress, and she probably never saw me at all or gave me a moment's consideration.

I watched Gordon during his marriage ceremony a few weeks ago. His voice was shaky and his hands were trembling, and he was as generally nervous as a young kitten. He supposed quite erroneously that he was the center of attention of the crowd gathered in the church, and it made him self-conscious. Now the facts were that no one there knew whether Gordon wore a white rose or a pink carnation in his buttonhole. The only reason he was there was because the ceremony could not well go on without his presence. If Gordon had only realized that everyone was looking at the girl, he would have been much easier.

Whether we are making a speech or presiding at a public gathering or getting married, we would be much more at ease if we would only realize that we are really of very little importance and that nobody is thinking about us so much as he is about himself.

Fruit Soups Are Refreshing

By JOSEPH BOGGIA, Chef
The Plaza Hotel, New York City

IN the eyes of thousands who have been brought up in the sound old traditions of American cooking, a dinner without soup is no dinner at all. Summer and winter, whether the mercury hovers in the eighties or the twenties, they demand their soup and refuse to be satisfied without it. They are rapidly learning to demand a cold soup in summer and a hot soup in winter, but one and all demand their soup.

Jellied bouillions and consommés are, of course, the familiar types of cold soups, but there is no reason why we should be restricted to these. In Norway, Germany and many other countries of Europe, cold fruit soups are widely enjoyed for their delicacy of flavor and refreshing qualities. There seems to be no good reason why we in this country should not seize the opportunity to add variety to this part of our menu.

Iced Fruit Soup—Mix and let stand in the refrigerator overnight one cup orange juice, three-fourths cup grapefruit juice, five cloves and a two-inch strip of cinnamon. Bring to the boiling point one cup of the syrup strained from a can of raspberries. Add a teaspoon of cornstarch mixed with cold water. Cook three minutes and add one-fourth cup sugar and one-eighth teaspoon salt. Add fruit juices, strain and place in refrigerator until very cold. Serve with shaved ice.

Grape Soup—Add one-half cup sugar to a half-pint of water and simmer until clear. Add one pint of juice pressed from ripe grapes, and the juice of one-half lemon. Add a half tablespoon of softened tapioca and again simmer until clear. Keep in refrigerator until very cold and serve with shaved ice.

Raspberry Soup—Let stand for one hour, one quart of mashed raspberries thoroughly mixed with one-half pound of sugar. Press through sieve. Heat slowly, stirring all the time. When boiling point is reached add one tablespoon cornstarch dissolved in cold water. When clear and smooth, add one-fourth cup non-alcoholic sherry. Remove and keep in refrigerator until well chilled. Serve with shaved ice.

Hints For Homemakers

WHEN hats are being rejuvenated keep in mind that the ribbons can be given a fresh appearance by dipping them in a quart of water in which three table-spoons of sugar have been thoroughly dissolved.

Vinegar and salt make a fine polish for brass and copper. Put salt on a soft cloth that has been dampened with vinegar and rub the object to be polished. The same combination is one of the best cleaners for the inside of flower vases that have been stained.

A few drops of lime juice gives a delightful new flavor to honeydew melon.

"God" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 6. The Golden Text was, "Thus saith the Lord the King of Israel, and his redeemer the Lord of hosts; I am the first, and I am the last; and beside me there is no God" (Isaiah 44:6).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Israel: And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might" (Deut. 6:4, 5).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is infinite, the only Life, substance, Spirit, or Soul, the only Intelligence of the universe, including man" (p. 330).

CHANNEL LAKE COUNTRY CLUB NEWS

The July Fourth week-end, with the large crowds filling the club house and grounds each day, the several golf events, and especially the dance Saturday night, were evidences of a real live club, and a very happy crowd.

The dance, which was so ably managed by Mrs. Sandell, was very well attended, the music was unusually fine, and the refreshments were bountiful, all of which was conducive to a most delightful occasion. Among those present were Messrs. Maermann, Mills, Tankersley, Sandell, Phillips, Ladd, Potter, Whitfield, Swarts, Hoffer, Ward, Heg, Cooper, L. Harry Arms, L. Dick Farwell, Oliver Nichols, George Bauer, Max and Ed. Maermann; Robert Tankersley, Drury Hollenbeck, and many other members and guests.

Thursday is the usual ladies' golf day, with luncheon, and on Friday a picnic is being planned for the children, details of which may be obtained through Mrs. Henry Paulson.

Saturday is Young People's night, and the chairman, Miss Brooke and the chairman, Miss Brooke will Phillips, and her committee, will post the details at the clubhouse on Saturday.

On Tuesday evening, July 1st, a group of ten ladies got together and gave Mrs. Tankersley and her sister, Mrs. Jarden, a surprise birthday party. The two occasions falling on the first and second of July. It was indeed a complete surprise, those in

48 LAKE CO. SCOUTS TO SPEND VACATION AT WISCONSIN CAMPS

Boys Will Delve in Indian Lore for Two Weeks During July

Forty-eight Scouts of six Lake County Boy Scout troops left today for over the week-end for Camps Chicah-gah-mib and Oh-da-ko-to in Wisconsin.

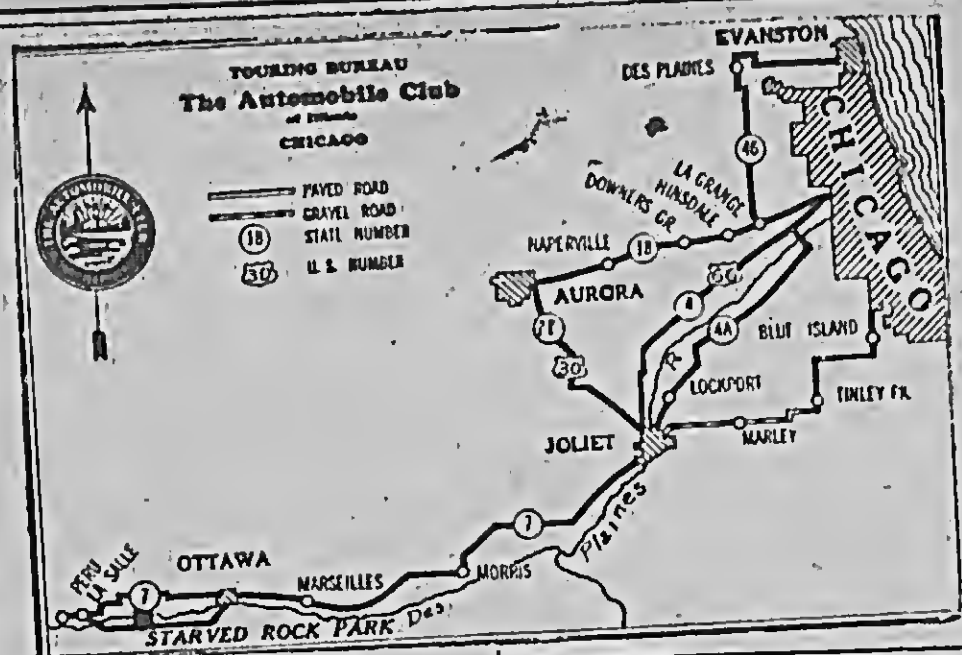

The former camp is located in Portage county, Wisconsin, and is operated by the Central Wisconsin Area Council, Boy Scouts of America. The latter camp is located in Kenosha county and is being operated for Scouts of Kenosha county, Wisconsin, and Lake county, Illinois.

The Scouts who left for Camp Chicah-gah-mib over the week-end are from Troops 2, 11, 15, and 18 of Waukegan, and Troop 42, Lake Bluff. The Scouts who left today for Camp Oh-da-ko-to are from Troops 3 and 9, Waukegan.

The program of the day of a Boy Scout at Camp is very full, indeed. Wholesome sports are provided to strengthen the body. Becoming acquainted with the ancient lore of the Indians keeps the minds of the boys stimulated. Daily chapel develops their spiritual natures. The belief that the ideals of the Boy Scout organizations throughout the country have a definite and beneficial influence upon the members of the various groups is steadily becoming more common in the minds of the parents. As the juvenile crime records prove, only a negligible percentage of the misdemeanors and crimes are committed by Boy Scouts.

MOTOR CLUB HEADS MOVE FOR WIDENING RT. 21 TO STATE LINE

Seeks Sanction of Antioch Residents for Plan to Make 40 Ft. Pavement

NOON MEETING TO BE HELD HERE TUESDAY

Approval of the proposal to widen Route 21, Milwaukee avenue, to the width of 40 feet from Half Day to the Wisconsin state line, will be sought from Antioch citizens next Tuesday at noon when Chicago Motor club officials will be present at a meeting to be held at the Episcopal Parish Hall.

A. C. Bryans, assistant director of safety, and John Dixon, branch manager of the Chicago Motor club, will preside at the meeting and explain the plan for road widening in the metropolitan area. Senator Ray Paddock is also expected to attend the meeting.

Briefly, the plan concerns the presenting of a petition to the state legislature asking that body to appropriate funds from the Motor Fuel Tax in the years 1932-33 to be used for road widening purposes.

A meeting of this kind was held Tuesday in Libertyville, and a committee was appointed by the chamber of commerce and the city council to discuss ways and means of routing the super highway west of that city.

State Senator Ray Paddock of Waukegan outlined the state's difficulty in obtaining rights-of-way for highways, adding that the expense of widening the route through the cities and villages would be charged to the city or village.

Fourth Annual Legion Fete Is Big Success

The fourth annual American Legion Festival, conceded to be one of the most successful ever held in Antioch, closed here Sunday night. Attended by thousands over the Fourth of July holiday, the grounds assumed a regular pageant aspect throughout the three-day fete, and the event added materially to the local post's building fund. Although a complete checkup has not been made, it is estimated that nearly $1,000 was netted.

Attractions never before seen in the lake region were brought to Antioch by the Legionnaires and thousands saw the bright lights and enjoyed the amusements provided.

Observing the patronage accorded the ferris wheel, merry-go-round and the chair-plane, citizens are of the opinion that an amusement park here as an all summer proposition would not only prove an attraction but would be a paying venture.

MRS. DAVID JOHNSTON

"For twelve years I suffered from stomach trouble and constipation," said Mrs. David Johnston, Marblehead, Ill., near Quincy. "Gas formed after meals, and nearly every night for twelve years I was forced to take medicine for my bowels. My nerves became badly shattered and sleep was often out of the question. Weak kidneys caused frequent night risings and often brought on frightful dizzy spells during the day."
"I decided to try Konjola and before I had finished the second bottle I could see a decided change for the better in my condition. I have taken eight bottles of Konjola to date and I can eat anything I wish without discomfort or suffering of any kind. My nerves are strong, I sleep well and my kidneys are normal again. My husband is now taking Konjola with the same good results. I never hesitate to recommend this great medicine."

Although Konjola works quickly it is considered best to take from six to eight bottles for a thorough treatment. Konjola deserves its name as the medicine with more than a million friends.
Konjola is sold in Antioch, Illinois, at S. H. Reeves' drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

ASSESSMENT ROLL PRINTED THIS WEEK

The assessment for Antioch township appears in today's edition of the News. The list includes all real estate changes made since last year and the personal property tax list for the year.

The board of review is now in session at the court house in Waukegan, and all complaints should be filed with the board prior to September 1, in order that adjustments may be made.

AUCTION AND SALE BILLS

Let us help you prepare your sale bill copy. Since we handle so much of this work we are well equipped to give you exactly what you want, when you want it. Bills printed as we print them get attention and increase results.

Dividend Printing

There is one kind of printing that you want—printing that pays a dividend on the investment.

A letterhead with right sort of type properly balanced is a real business asset. It wins the approval of the person receiving your letter, and while he is in this frame of mind your letter is read.

The same reasoning applies to any other job of printing. Neatness, the right weight and kind of paper, the color of the ink, the selection of the type, all play an important part in the production of dividend printing.

We are equipped to give you that kind of printing. Let us prove it to you.

Under the 3c per kilowatt-hour portion of the new reduced rate for residential electric service (effective August 1) you can run your electric fan for 1/10 of a cent per hour

Friendship Is Worth Keeping

WHEN friends move away to distant cities, you can carry on your friendship by telephone. You may not be able to see each other so often but you can "voice visit" whenever you want to.

A hundred miles or so is no bar to friendship. You can still have the same pleasant chats you used to have when you were neighbors. Additional distance does not lessen the quality of telephone service.

Try calling that friend today. You will be agreeably surprised at the Speed, Clearness and Inexpensiveness of Long Distance telephone service.

Silver Lake Maintains Inter-Co. League Lead

Antioch Loses Another Fast Game To Pirates

COLORED TEAM COMING SUN.

Inter-County League
	W L Pct.
Silver Lake	5 1 .800
Somers	3 3 .500
Wilmet	4 2 .666
Antioch	0 6 .000

Silver Lake maintained the lead in the inter-county league by defeating Somers, 13 to 6 on the latter's field, and the Wilmet Pirates, in second position, increased their percentage by 66 points by a 9-6 win over Antioch.

The Antioch-Pirates fracas here was a ball game until the last man was out in the ninth inning. One bad inning gave the visitors a seven run lead which the locals could not overcome.

Sheehan pitched great ball after he got warmed up, having replaced Miller who was firing wildly.

North Shore Giants Next
A baseball treat is offered by Manager Joe Miller next Sunday when he brings the North Shore Giants to the local park. The Giants are one of the leading colored teams in the middle west and they have been playing winning ball all season. Colored teams, if good, are always popular, and Manager Miller is fortunate in booking a team of this calibre.

MASTNE PITCHES GREAT GAME TO DEFEAT PIKEVILLE

Locals Set Visitors Back, 3-1, in Fast Game July 4

Howard Mastne, Antioch high school star, pitched a great game of baseball here July 4th when he let Pikeville, Wis., down with three scattered hits while his teammates gleaned six safeties from the offerings of Britton and won 3 to 1. Only three errors marred the defensive work of the teams, two by Antioch and one was chalked up against Pikeville. The locals displayed the best brand of baseball shown here this season.

peet to shortly. Mary Jane and John will join their parents. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clark have a splendid home on the shores of Lake Marie. Charles, Jr., who attends Dartmouth university, and his brother, Al, have been spending the past week getting the home in shape for the arrival of their parents this week.

Harry Hasty, who draws pictures, rents cottages, and runs a general store, with the aid of Mrs. Hasty, is making us that it looks like a big year for Oak Park and River Forest people on Bluff Lake. Walter Olson, 429 Home avenue, is about ready to occupy his summer residence. Harold Holman, 207 Washington boulevard, is making plans to leave Oak Park for the summer months. Earl C. Lutz, 1145 South East avenue, also has rented a cottage on Bluff Lake, as has J. D. Herron, 333 South Kenilworth avenue, and E. E. Sweney of River Forest. Mr. Hasty informs me that each year finds more Oak Park residents on their lake. Indeed, Mr. and Mrs. Hasty themselves once resided in our village, attending the Second Baptist church.

Clarence Cade, a member of the 1930 graduating class at Oak Park high school, will be seen about Lake Marie quite often this summer as guest of the Robinson family. Last year the Cade family were frequent visitors.

Camp St. Joseph, operated by the Dominican Sisters of Bishop Quarter school, 604 Lake street, is situated at Pettie Lake. Robert Voet and this writer earn their daily bread by watching after the youngsters each summer. Many Oak Park boys attend this spot in the idle months. The brother of Rev. Frawley of St. Giles Catholic church in the north of our village is situated as pastor of the new St. Peter's church in the town of Antioch.

Some of the Oak Park residents who spend time each year in Antioch are Mrs. Wm. A. Dunge, 1119 William street; Mrs. Wm. E. Cooper, 530 Fair Oaks avenue; Wm. Dorance, 1121 Washington boulevard; Willis Gilmer, 1020 North Oak Park avenue; Dr. Wm. Gray, 107 North Grove avenue; Harry Lattin, 1105 North Humphrey avenue.

It would be impossible to give the names of all the villagers who frequent this spot, but here are a few more: Maurice Loven, 1020 Superior street; Henry Oetting, 337 North Kenilworth avenue; Dr. W. E. Potter, 715 Lake street; Mrs. W. C. Scott, 944 South Clinton avenue; Wm. A. Stuchlik, 800 Wenonah avenue; Wm. S. Tate, 335 North Mapleton

A Friend in Need

The best "friend in need" in case of fire, accident, theft or death is—INSURANCE; and the average person carries less than half the insurance he should for the protection of property and family. And by insurance is meant all kinds of insurance.

For there are all kinds of insurance available. In fact, to list them here would more than fill the page. That is why we have "insurance specialists." There are men in this town who specialize in insurance, and who should be consulted about your insurance problems just as you consult your doctor on the problems of your health. These men can advise you as to your individual insurance needs. They can help you secure the protection to which you and your family are entitled.

INSURANCE is an important COMMUNITY PROBLEM! Lack of insurance is one of the primary causes of poverty; and poverty in a community works a hardship on everyone. TO BE PROPERLY INSURED is an OBLIGATION WHICH IS OWED YOUR FELLOW-TOWNSMAN!

There is no definite schedule of insurance which a person should carry! Individual conditions and circumstances govern individual cases.

PROPER INSURANCE PROTECTION SHOULD HAVE THE FOLLOWING SCOPE:

- 1: Protection of family in case of death.
- 2: Protection of property against all types of loss.
- 3: Protection of income in case of accident or sickness.
- 4: Protection for age-retirement.

YOUR insurance problem is worthy of intelligent thought and action NOW.

Many towns have been seriously handicapped by individual poverty due to inadequate life insurance protection or to devastating fires without proper fire insurance protection. Let's not take these chances in

In the midst of everything the Centurion stood ruthlessly through the heart of the convoy, lashing her broadside batteries at intervals to heighten the existing consternation. The frigates, responding to frenzied signals from the flagship, finally gave chase, but by the time they had discovered the whereabouts of the privateer the fog blanketed her, and Fellows changed his course to due south. He saw no more of the convoy, although in the morning he picked up one of its trailers, a little Scotch brigantine, which was so cranked a sailor that he burned her.

The following week, cruising backward and forward in wide loops across the track he expected Chatter to take, he spoke a Charleston privateer schooner, driven into these latitudes by a storm the Centurion had avoided. Her master had tracked the brig's course, but had seen nothing of the True Bounty, so Fellows turned northward again into a region of frequent fog, where the cold was biting and ice froze on the railings, until the men could scarcely find a footing when they went aloft.

Headwinds drove him back, and in mere moderate latitudes a pair of fast thirty-eight gun frigates, evidently one of the patrols on the watch for the hard-hitting Yankee men-of-war of the same class, chased the Centurion two days' sail to the southward. Having dodged his pursuers, Fellows caught a smart Plymouth snow, the Sprightly Jean, loaded with Jamaica rum, a cargo which Joshua could sell at a ready profit to the state of the New York market. He depleted his crew to man out the prize, and again pointed the brig's bow north.

Certain of the crew grumbled at this departure from the trade-routes. But Fellows held on his course to the Flitles, held on until he was convinced Chatter had not ventured so far a latitude.

Driving southeast, they struck the outboard track of the West Indian convoys, and snatched a sassy, six-hundred-ton ship, the Mary Carroll, of London, from under the guns of a raze and a thirty-two-gun frigate. Conflicting fires permitted the Centurion to make off with the prize. Coffee's snap-shooting with the Long Tom diminishing the frigate's ardor for the chase. A sweet prize, the Mary Carroll, her strong-hold held ten thousand pounds in gold, and her holds were full of fancy goods and kekshaws. Fellows and ten men and a prize-master aboard her, and dispatched her for New York, after shifting the coils to the Centurion.

There was no more grumbling, now that the brig steered east by south for the trade-routes to southern Europe and the Mediterranean. The rigid blockade of American ports seemed to have released British merchantmen from their earlier dread of the Yankee privateers, and these southerly seas almost swarmed with shipping. The Centurion captured a small Canton trader, the Pembroke, of Bristol, and the very next day ran down the Jessie, brig, of Palmyra, bound for the Gold coast with trade-goods.

Simply as a privateering enterprise, the cruise had been successful up to this point, but Fellows was perturbed by the failure of his main objective. He had come to sea, first of all, to catch the True Bounty, and the True Bounty had disappeared as completely as the Flying Dutchman. Sillars said was forever trying to round the Cape of Good Hope—and forever disappointed by headwinds blown against him by an outraged Divinity.

"The course is southeast by east," he announced to the deck, who relieved him. "We'll follow it until we strike one of the Gibraltar patrol. I'll cruise 'twixt here and the latitude of Cadiz." And they zigzagged westward, now nor'west, now west by north, now west, now west by south, now so'west. The third day, no hour past sunrise, a thin hail drifted down from the main-top.

"Sail ho! Fowler plints to starboard," Spencer, officer of the deck, summoned Fellows, who tumbled out of his bunk, half-dressed. One look through his glass, and he sped a man forward to rouse Coffee.

"Take the glass," Fellows directed. "Can you make out that sail? Is she the True Bounty?"

"Coffee don't wan' no glass, Mars'r Fellows. Dat him Chatter's ship."

The jagged white teeth glistened in the cold sunlight.

"Oh, my aunt! Now we shoot him Long Tom, mars'r. Now we shoot him plenty hard."

Fellows' lips tightened. He strove to reconcile the rising floods of exultation and sorrow, of triumph and foreboding, that choked him emotionally.

"But shoot carefully," he warned. "We may require to cripple a mast, but I'll have no killing—if it can be avoided."

"Yah, mars'r. Coffee knew. We don't hit him plinty 'll Misses. But him Chatter—"

The immense black hands, free of the swaying railings, opened and closed, crooked and straightened.

"But why should you hate Chatter?" Fellows questioned.

"Coffee hate him Chatter for dat so-hate him, mars'r. Yo' see! Coffee kill him plenty quick."

"Not gave I bid you," Fellows cautioned sternly, descending to the deck.

A dangerous force, this hatred, he reflected. A disease which seeped from one heart to another. But a smoldering glow burned in his blue eyes, and his jaw squared aggressively. No moment for sentiment. This was the day of his vengeance, the day he had awaited for months. Ah, but why should the savor of it be bitter in his mouth?

He remembered Joshua's parting advice. Hate! Hate enough, and all would be simple. Hate every one of your enemies, now, every one linked with them. There was no root and branch. And a mighty wave of resentment swamped his spirit, beset against Joshua, against Ben, against Chatter, against—against—He clawed open his neckcloth so feverishly that his officers, busy though they were, regarded him perplexedly. Aye, against her! Above all, against her!

She, who consorted with the nation's enemies, who intrigued with Wellington and God alone knew what other British statesmen, who entertained Collishaw's suit, who had not lifted a finger to save him from being dogged! Why shouldn't he hate her? She merited nothing from him. She, whose lover was the man who had whipped him! She, who had accepted a visit from this man after their lips had met that last night on the True Bounty!

"Well, Naow," He snarled, "Murdered Me, Ain't Ye?"

Something swelled up in his throat, hot, suffocating. Hate? Aye, hate! "Run out that Long Tom," he ordered hoarsely. "A shot betwixt his masts, Coffee."

Chatter had the weather gauge, and maneuvered expertly to make use of the advantage; but the Centurion could sail two knots to the True Bounty's one, and a couple of round-shot between his masts seemed to convince him of the hopelessness of his plight. He lay to while the brig overhauled him and rounded his stern in position to rake. Fellows dominating her crowded decks, his slight figure taut with repressed energy.

Above, on the lofty poop of the True Bounty, Chatter glowered sullenly, hostile him Ben Ingelple, an expression of well-murdered resentment clouding the merchant's chubby countenance. Cara, muffled in a great coat of fur, clung to her father's arm. There was curiosity in her glance, but no fear; and as often before, Fellows was constrained to admit a grudging measure of respect for her.

The Centurion came back, with a din of hissing canvas, and not waiting to be hailed, Ingelple hailed angrily:

"What is this that you do, Captain Fellows? You have reason to know this vessel. D'you not see the colors she flies?"

"I'm not assured you have a justifiable claim to that flag's protection, str." Fellows answered shortly. "Captain Chatter, I'm coming aboard to examine your papers."

"Purty high piracy, I'd say," whined Chatter. "A letter-of-marque don't give ye the right to search American vessels."

Nimrod Supher nudged Fellows' elbow.

"'Tis as he says," murmured the lawyer-mutineer. "Look to your commission, my friend. The private ship-of-war is distinguished from the regular naval vessel by a limitation of her legal exercise of hostility and supervision."

"I didn't ask your advice," snapped Fellows. "It comes late in the day, Mr. Supher, you'll take the ship. Tom, call away the longboat's crew; you'll go us coxswain. Yes, Coffee, you, too."

In the bustle of mustering the boarding party, no one on the Centurion noticed the disappearance of the Ingelple and Chatter from the True Bounty's poop. Indeed, when the longboat pulled under her lee the only members of the merchantman's crew in sight were young Burke and the helmsman, but a rope ladder had been lowered from the waist, and Fellows climbed his jerking rungs without a thought of danger, bidding his men follow him one at a time. He reached the bulwarks level, and vaulted carelessly to the deck—to be pounced upon by a dozen seamen, whose hairy, brown paws effectually sealed his lips.

In the background Chatter hovered, whining orders:

"That's right, men! Grab the damned pirate, I calculate he'll do for a hostage. Here, one of ye cut loose that ladder."

But the last word was still wet on his tongue when a four resounded from the bulwarks. Fellows glimpsed a gleaming black shape sailing through the air—and crashed down on the deck with the rest of the dozen as Coffee bounced from their midst. Right and left, the negro leaped and struck, legs and arms hitting with ferocious accuracy.

Half-blinded, dazed, battered sore, Fellows staggered to his feet, thinking to support Coffee's charge. But a pistol cracked behind him, and he spun around in time to see Chatter drawing a second weapon. And instinctively, without conscious effort, the Long Islander snatched for his own pistol, and pressed the trigger.

Chatter's green eyes widened bewilderedly; the pistol slipped from his hand, his fingers clung in his chest.

"Well, naow," he snarled. "Murdered me, ain't ye?"

And he toppled on the deck, a tumbled heap of garments, leaking rustled.

"Will you have my surgeon?" Fellows offered perfunctorily.

"No use. But ye won't find what ye want. She's ag'in ye. Workin' for—British. But ye'll never know—not for certain."

The grotesque chin dropped, and Fellows understood the man was dead—was surprised, too, that he should experience neither satisfaction nor compunction. But there was no time for reflection. The longboat's thirty, pouring over the lee bulwarks, were delving the True Bounty's crew toward into the fore'sle, no difficult enterprise, for the spirit had gone out of the ship's defenders, and they flinched under the flits of cutlasses and Tom Grogan's heavy abuse. Nimrod Supher, tugging the boards, of course, was wringing his hands, against the sight of Chatter's body.

"My dear Lion! What a misfortune! And a delicate question in admiralty law. Manslaughter—in fact, it may be murder on the high seas—"

"Captain Fellows killed Captain Chatter in self-defense, sir," Cara Ingelple's voice was low-pitched and steady, and there was color in her sun-warmed cheeks as she stepped from the cabin companionway. Ben Ingelple, who followed her, was much less master of himself. His hands shook, and his mouth wobbled nervously. The dream, following after them, funeral in black, her fat hands clicking a rosary, her heavy eyes roving and probing, was as plegmatic as ever she had been in Perenna. "You saw it with me, Father?" Cara appealed to Ben.

"Captain Chatter fired first. A dastardly shot!"

"A most lamentable incident," quavered Ben.

A MOCK MARRIAGE AND THE REAL THING

(By D. J. Walsh.)

FOUR years Jack and Elaine had been in love. At least, that was the general opinion in the clique in which they entertained and were entertained. And that fact also gave rise to much friendly speculation, for they were the only couple in the seven which composed the "gang" who were not married.

The girls, who were all young enough to be referred to in the social columns as "nec," were inclined to lay the blame, if it might be called blame, at the feet of Jack. They conceded as one that he was mid-Victorian in many of his ideas; that he regarded the woman's place as in the home, and felt that he should accumulate his "sinke" before burdening himself with the shackles of matrimony and the attendant responsibilities. They were sorry for Elaine, without committing themselves by making a statement of that fact.

"The men were more frank in their criticism."

"If I had a girl like Elaine eating her heart out for me," declared Fellow to the group of four who sat languidly on the veranda of the country club, "you can bet it wouldn't take me more than ten minutes to give the license bureau the grand rush. It is a pity he doesn't see it."

"Oh, he sees it, all right," retorted Bill Grimes, "and then, again, there may be another side to the story. She has a great many responsibilities, you know. She has a great sense of responsibility toward her mother. I've known Elaine for seventeen years. We grew up together and I understand her pretty thoroughly. She is rather independent and I don't think she cares a rap for the idea of becoming a burden on any man. Yes, I think there's another side to the story."

"Well, I'd like to see it. There doesn't seem to be any justice in a wonderful couple like that going their individual ways when they could be so happily married."

"If you fellows want to see them married so badly," interrupted Lorimer, who had been smoking quietly as if in deep thought, "you might refer the matter to Bill Prescott. He's a sort of cure-all and life of the party for this gang. Although I didn't like the last practical joke he pulled on me, I think he's a pretty good organizer. Why don't you get him to open his little bag of tricks?"

"There's Prescott now, digging up the turf on the links. Call him over. He'd be glad for a legitimate excuse to get himself out of that sand trap."

Prescott came on the run in answer to their call.

"Have you seen Jack Day around any place?" he was asked.

"Yeah," he exclaimed, "left this morning for a business trip to New York. Elaine and her mother took the same train. He said he would be back a week from Thursday."

"That is the night of the deluge at your place, isn't it, Grimes?" asked Lorimer.

"Good! We wanted to talk to you, Prescott, about these two. They ought to be sensible and get married. You have an imagination. Speak up."

Prescott's face broke into a broad smile. "Let me think it over," he said. "Perhaps I can cook up something."

True to his word, the wheels of intrigue began to move rapidly under Prescott's experienced hands.

He called Lorimer on the phone, almost incoherent with excitement.

"You and Nadine are to be best man and bridesmaid," he exclaimed. "I want you to be on hand at Grimes' place the night of the party in your tuxedo. I'm going to pull a mock wedding. I'll get the license with my wife. I haven't yet decided whether to make it the real article or to have a theatrical agency send up a fake minister to perform the ceremony. What do you think?"

"The idea sounds good to me," said Lorimer. "But I'd suggest you get a theatrical agency minister. Keep yourself out of deep water. If you can, I'll swear them all to secrecy. I'll also arrange to pick Jack and Elaine up at the station and bring them to the party."

"The gang," with the enthusiasm of zealots, entered into the spirit of the intrigue and each contributed something to make it more elaborate and successful. They felt, as one, that although the affair would be merely a joke, it would bring to a head the question they had debated among themselves. They entered into it as actors who are playing a drama with in a drama.

The stage was set. The arrangements were made and every detail had been attended to, as carefully planned and timed as a stage production. In excited knots of two and three, the actors of the comedy talked over their roles in subdued voices.

At nine o'clock Lorimer drove up in his car and deposited the intended victims on the front porch. He went into the house with them.

They entered to the place a bewer of flowers. Their wraps were taken from them, and, flanked by Lorimer and his wife, Jack and Elaine were led into another room, which was arranged, even in detail, to look like a small chapel. At the other end of the room stood a minister.

Jack and Elaine looked at each other with startled expressions. Then they smiled at each other and in their smiles was a note of acquiescence. They marched up to the minister and, without a tremor in the voice of either, pronounced the mock marriage ceremony after the mock minister.

This was the unexpected, and it showed plainly in the dumbfounded expressions of the audience. Prescott relieved the situation by gestulating wildly for silence and telling them by pantomime to follow his lead.

The mock ceremony was over and the bride and groom turned to receive the congratulations of their friends, but no one stirred. The joke had gone too far. There seemed no alternative but to disillusion the young couple and to confess the complexity of every one in the hoax. Prescott stepped forward to explain.

"Before he could speak, Jack Day touched him on the shoulder. 'Just a minute, Bill,' he exclaimed. 'I have something to say.'"

He turned to the crowd with an odd smile playing about the corners of his mouth.

"Elaine and I want to thank you for arranging this little surprise for us," he said; "we certainly appreciate it. We feel that it's the next best thing to being married at home, and it was thoughtful of you. But what we can't understand is this: How did you know about it so soon? We were married only yesterday in New York."

Letter Writing by Men Seems to Be Lost Art

Not one man in a million can write a satisfactory letter to his wife, according to William Feather, Cleveland philosopher and syndicated analyst of human nature. Probably he meant to declare that few men are able to write an interesting letter, that men, in fact, are poor letter writers. If that is his position we can join him.

In earlier days in this country letters were not numerous, but they were real letters. Some recent biographies have contained letters that were magnificent, written merely to convey information or carry on a discussion with a relative or friend. Today one may telegraph, or use the telephone, or dictate a note. Few men give up the time necessary to prepare a new letter, with a bit of sentiment, even to the wife who is away on vacation.

Women are good letter writers, according to Dr. Roy Davis of Boston university, who made a study of letters written by groups of professional men and women. In comparison he said the women were far out in the lead. Women are able to get the personal note and touch in a letter, something men do not even try to accomplish. And a letter from a near friend, relative or member of one's own family, that has no personal note in it, must be scored low; it leaves much to be desired. About the only kind of good letter writing done by men is by a few specialists who are in the mail-order business and handle the following letters.—Ohio State Journal.

Justice by Ordeal

The Celts in Ireland, the Germans before their conversion to Christianity, and the early Slavs made use of various kinds of ordeals in administering justice. They allowed the defendant to prove his innocence by remaining unharmed while undergoing the ordeal.

There were two forms of the ordeal of iron in use. One was to allow the accused, blindfolded, to establish his innocence by his ability to avoid stepping on red hot plowshares, from six to twelve in number, spaced a certain distance apart. The other form compelled the accused to carry a red-hot iron, usually for a distance of nine feet. This ordeal was generally chosen by persons of rank.

Most Punctual Prisoner

The height of chivalry was exhibited at the penitentiary of Verdunova near Breslau, when a prisoner made his escape and left behind a note pinned to his coat on which was written, "I'll be back tonight at seven sharp. Going home to see mother."

The prisoner kept his word and at the appointed hour duly reported for work. A negligent guardian responsible for the escape was arraigned before the tribunal and sentenced to 75 days in prison and three months' privation from public office.—Washington Star.

Knower, Doer, Sayer

For the universe has three children, born at one time, which require under different names in every system of thought, whether they be called cause, operation and effect; or, more poetically, Jove, Pluto, Neptune; or, theologically, the Father, the Spirit, and the Son; but which we will call the Knower, the Doer and the Sayer. These stand respectively for the love of truth, for the love of good, and for the love of beauty. These three are equal.—Alfred Waldo Emerson.

Mexico's War on Rats

Agents of the Mexican department of agriculture are waging determined warfare against a plague of rats which recently have invaded wide areas in the states of Jalisco and Michoacan. In response to appeals from the farmers of the affected districts, enormous troops have been constructed. The capture of 50,000 rats in a single night in a trap half a kilometer long was reported by one of the agents operating in Jalisco.

The Girl on Smoky Top

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

SHE was a source of great interest to the people in the valley below—that unknown girl who had taken possession of the old Clark farm set aslant on old Smoky Top's slope. Farmers harvesting their crops would pause and glance curiously at the thin spiral of smoke traveling skyward above the tretops and wonder why she was there.

Especially young John Hayes who had recently inherited his father's broad acres on which he and his mother lived alone. For John's brothers and sisters had long ago married and scattered and now had farms of their own.

"Your turn will come," his mother frequently prophesied. "And I dare say Kitty Weatherly will suit me as well as anybody."

At which her son would clumsily shift the subject. Oh, he supposed he'd marry Kitty ultimately, but for the present he had no wish to settle his fate, too definitely. And his mother knew that, since the day he drove to town and parked next a dusty little runabout, his mind had been filled with visions of a slender, brown-eyed girl with sun gold curls clustering under her felt hat, she herself would not have felt so sure of being mother-in-law to Kitty.

As fall drew near, one might indeed have been pardoned for leaning on the pasture bars and gazing at Smoky Top whose sides were a colorful mass of reds and greens and browns, set off by the more somber evergreens. And, as the season progressed, without rain, John would so lean on the bars. But sometimes he would frown and think of fire.

"Just a spark and she's set off like salt shingles," he muttered one day. Then one evening, out driving with Kitty Weatherly at his side, he suddenly swung off from the main highway onto a hard-packed dirt road that wound in sharp, foliage-hidden curves up the mountain.

"This is exciting," giggled Kitty. "Haven't been up there since I was a kid. Besides, I'd like to catch a sight of that city girl, Jim Lawrence—" she paused catching John's quick look; then continued defiantly—"well, he's been working for her, although why he should with his big farm—anyhow, he says she's poor as John's turkey. That her uncle left her the place and it's the only home she's got and she's got to make it pay. But Jim says it wouldn't grow enough to feed a starving cat."

Her companion's thoughts were a jumble of speculations. So the stranger girl wasn't a rich young lady riding a hobby. So Kitty was still seeing Jim, his old rival.

"What Jim says seems to carry considerable weight with you," he remarked coldly. "Just when—" he paused abruptly. "What's that?" he cried. "Smoke!"

The car shot forward beneath the pressure of his foot, while Kitty clutched his arm in terror, both at the mad swerve with which they rounded curves and at the thought of fire.

"Can't you turn?" she managed to gasp.

John shook his head. He hadn't thought of turning—only of going forward to find out just where that fire might be. If it were well above the farm, the wind might carry it by, or a well-planned back fire or trench might repel it. At the best he could get the girl and bring her down to safety. His heart gleamed within him and he was not conscious of Kitty's grasp on his arm.

Then, as they swung around the bend, they saw the fire. It was the farmhouse itself, and John's expert eye saw at once that, set as the old house was in the very center of the clearing, there was little likelihood of the surrounding forest becoming involved.

Two hurrying figures were moving to a safe distance, what few pieces of furniture they had evidently been able to take from within the building.

John, followed by Kitty, leaped to the ground.

"No use trying to save the house," yelled Lawrence. "Let 'er burn. My wife here—"

"Your wife?" both Kitty and John cried in the word.

"Married only this afternoon," shouted Jim, still busy tugging chairs and tables. "Chimney must have caught while we were gone. Sparks on the roof did for the rest. Makes no real difference. Going to live at my place, of course." He threw a tender, protective glance at the girl, who seemed lovelier and even more desirable than John remembered her.

"The old tinder box might as well go one time as another."

And so it did, burning clear to the ground until only the blackened, smoldering embers were left. And it seemed to John as if, hidden in the debris, were the ashes of his idle dreams. Idle because he had made no effort to press his suit and bring them to fruition.

"You seem dreadfully quiet," complained Kitty as they drove slowly homeward.

For answer, John resolutely put his arm about her plump waist. Then, "It's about time you and I thought of our own wedding," he said. "Mother's been expecting it this long while."

After all, reality was better than a dream. Perhaps.

Disease Germs Cannot Live in Mother's Milk

Scientists have known for some time that babies fed on mother's milk were protected in some mysterious fashion from various diseases such as whooping cough, measles, diphtheria and the like. Now it appears that the mother's milk actually has the power of killing disease germs. Dr. Friedrich Schlegel, bacteriologist at Bern, Switzerland, has experimented with milk from nursing mothers and found that the milk has this bactericidal power to a very high degree. If the milk is kept at a mean temperature of 36 degrees Celsius for 24 hours, this power may be demonstrated for 24 hours or more. Such bacteria as get into it are at least very much retarded in their development. If not actually killed, the milk is even able to destroy bacteria which do not normally occur in it. Boiled milk has not this power. Doctor Schlegel has succeeded in filtering milk, obtaining a clear greenish liquid which contained albumin but no fat. The germs naturally contained in the milk stayed back with the fat, but the power to kill bacteria remained in the clear filtrate. This was proved by adding germs to the filtrate, which destroyed them.

Advance in Photography

Daylight screens have been developed to a point where it is possible to project pictures on them in the diffused daylight of a room with thoroughly satisfactory results. To do this requires projection from the rear of the screen. Darkness is required back of the screen between the projector and screen.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Murder of Dr. Parkman.

ONE of the most appalling murders ever committed in the United States was that of Dr. George Parkman, one of the wealthiest and best-known citizens of Boston, by Dr. John W. Webster, a professor of chemistry at Harvard university and a lecturer in the Medical college in Boston. This was a remarkable case not only because of the reputation of the murderer but also because of the mystery as to why a man of such marked intellect and of such high standing in his community and his profession should have been guilty of the crime for which he was executed.

There is no question that Doctor Webster deserved his fate, for the only excuse he had to offer was that of an ungovernable temper, but the records of crime contain few cases even remotely approaching this reversion to the brute by a man who was educated, cultured and refined in the extreme.

Doctor Parkman, the murdered man, was one of the founders of the Massachusetts Medical college and it was through his influence that Doctor Webster was chosen as a lecturer on chemistry at that institution. At the time, Doctor Parkman was a man of sixty years of age, with the most practical of habits. Accordingly, when he did not return home one day at his usual hour, his family became alarmed, but no attempt at a detailed search was made until the following morning, while it was almost a week before any definite clue was located. It then became known that the missing man had had an appointment with Doctor Webster on the day he disappeared but, as Doctor Webster himself informed the police of this fact, no further importance was attached to it until it was discovered that Doctor Parkman had loaned Webster money upon two occasions and that the men had had several quarrels over the debts.

Doctor Webster was finally taken into custody, charged with at least a guilty knowledge of the crime and finally broke down and confessed, saying:

"He called me a scoundrel and a liar and continued to heap the bitterest taunts and epithets upon me. Then he showed me a letter congratulating him in securing my appointment as professor of chemistry and he fairly shrieked: 'I was the means of getting you your position and now I will get you out of it.'"

"Then the doctor began heaping more threats and invectives upon me. At first I tried to pacify him, but it was of no avail. I forgot everything and, feeling nothing but the sting of his words, became excited to the highest degree of passion. When he thrust his fist into my face, I seized a heavy stick of wood and struck him with all the force that passion could lend me."

In his confusion, Doctor Webster told how the horror of his crime suddenly rushed upon him and, in a wild attempt to conceal the evidence of the murder, he removed the clothing from the body of the dead man and burned it. He then dismembered the body and disposed of it in a number of ways, believing that he had hidden all traces of the murder. But, in spite of his skill as a chemist, he was unable to hide all portions of the body and a sufficient amount of the remains were found to furnish the clue that led to his arrest and subsequent confession.

So plain were the facts in the case and so clear was Doctor Webster's statement of the manner in which he had acted that no attempt was made even to secure a reprieve. In full view of the college where he had taught, on a scaffold erected only a short distance from the house in which the murder had been committed, Doctor John W. Webster paid the full penalty demanded by the law.

But an examination of the police records of two continents fail to reveal an instance where a man of similar culture and education permitted himself to be overcome by his passions to the point of becoming a murderer—particularly since there was no excuse of his being under the influence of drugs or liquor. In fact, as one of the famous criminologists has stated: "The more we study the details of the Parkman murder, the more different it becomes to solve the mystery of the human emotions or to present any clear analysis of the reasons for men's instinctive actions."

Skin of Giant Snake

What is said to be the skin of the largest snake in the New world is in the Bronx Zoological park. This skin is twenty-two feet long and three feet wide. It is dark olive in color, marked with round dark spots, and belonged to an anaconda. Mr. Dittmar is quoted as saying that this specimen exceeds by seven feet the length of any snake he has seen in the New world.

Flying Dynamo

Have you ever considered that latest of feathered things, the humming bird? He's really an amazing creature in many ways aside from his minute dimensions, notes a writer in the Farm Journal. He has greater horse power per ounce than an airplane motor, and is probably the quickest lighter of all birds in defense of his nest.

Trondhjem, Viking Capital

Haymaking in Norway.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

TRONDHJEM, old Viking capital, and the surrounding country of central Norway, recently celebrated the nine hundredth anniversary of the death of Norway's patron, Saint Olaf, the king who established Christianity in Europe's northwestern corner. The city's name was officially changed a few months ago to Nidaros, its ancient designation; but the inhabitants are not unanimously pleased with the change, and "Trondhjem" continues in partial use.

Modern Trondhjem is built on a peninsula formed by the River Nid and the Trondhjem fjord which indents Norway's west coast. Its houses are cheerful frame structures painted in white or light colors, with pointed plants making colorful spots at their windows. The royal palace, a huge, white building, is one of the largest wooden buildings in the world.

The shops have many unusual wares for visitors. Furs are sold and there is a demand for blue and silver fox, polar bear and ermine. Elderdawn, quills, bear skin rugs, embroidered, carved wood souvenirs, and silver carved in old Norse designs are popular with tourists. Many of the larger shops are on Olaf Trøegvasson street, which was named after the town's founder.

Although it lies in the same latitude as southern Iceland, Trondhjem has summers like those of England, and its winters are no more severe than those of Germany. The river and the fjord are seldom frozen. In summer numerous trees and shrubbery give the town a semitropical appearance which the visitor had not expected.

The long Arctic summer daylight has its effect on the farmlands surrounding Trondhjem. Often there are two crops a year of produce which yields but one crop in temperate climates.

Norse Coronation Place.

Trondhjem was the coronation place of ancient Norse kings; and the present king, Haakon VII, was crowned there in 1906 when the union of Sweden and Norway was dissolved. The city has a population of some 65,000. Much of its life centers about the water front. The ship building industry is brisk and there is a boat service between Trondhjem and Bergen and the North Cape. Numerous fishing boats come in with their cargoes of salted herring to be deposited in the tall, quaint gabled warehouses which line the quays.

The lofty Gothic spires of Trondhjem cathedral rise above the surrounding low buildings of purely Norse architecture in striking contrast to them. The cathedral looks like a transplanted English church in a Norse setting. Its Gothic style may be attributed to Norsemen, living in England when the Gothic architecture was attaining its vogue, who preferred it to the simpler Norse style and incorporated it into the cathedral. The structure was begun during the reign of Olaf the Quiet, between 1000 and 1003. It has been restored many times but each restorer has kept to the Gothic style and the present restoration has endeavored to follow the original building.

All the excitement which marks our most generally observed holiday, Christmas, attends the Day of St. John on June 24. While it bears a Christian name, the holiday and its customs go back to pagan origin. In effect the day still is a festival of the sun. Green birch trees adorn every house and children carry evergreen branches through the streets. The analogy to Christmas breaks down, however, when younger folk crowd into boats on the fjord or hike to the mountain woods where, at twilight, are decked with bonfires. All night long these bonfires burn, as ghostly figures of the merry makers dance and sing around them.

Life in Central Norway.

Yearly more visitors are strapping on their knapsacks for walking trips through the rugged countryside of central Norway, where every rock-hewn road seems to lead to a fjord, and where the native customs defy the inroads of such dribbles of travel as now sift through.

The visitor goes to church, and the simple services seem stereotyped enough until a bit of statuary descends from the ceiling. The figure of an angel, supported by a rod, holds a bowl filled with water. The surprised visitor realizes this theatrical appearance is a baptismal font.

The simplicity and innocence of the country folk in the remote and isolated sections is betokened by their promiscuous bathing. And by "bathing" is meant just that; not the diversion of water splashing and sand sunning, but getting oneself clean. A log hut is the village bathhouse. A furnace of stones is heated and water poured over the red-hot surface.

Into this steam steps a family—men, women, children, visiting relatives and neighbors. The bathers switch each other with birch twigs to induce more perspiration and gleefully throw buckets of cold water over each other when the heat becomes too intense. All of this is nothing of an orgy—but as prosaic as our daily bath. The rural Norwegian would see nothing immoral nor funny in an American hotel which inadvertently advertised "1,000 rooms, and bath."

In a Vermont village each family once had its horse and buggy, a vehicle now supplanted by the automobile. In a Norway hamlet a boat is the principal family conveyance in summer. There fishing takes the place of farming and the houses are strung around a bend of a fjord instead of along a rambling main street.

Grazing herds of goats, the principal industry of Norway's hilly north country, and these flocks give rise to the picturesque goat-girl. The mountain pastures usually are far removed from the villages and each spring sees the young farm women driving their herds up the mountain paths to some lofty but sheltered valley among the glistening, snow-capped peaks. There they remain all summer long, camping in wooden huts, visited occasionally by their men folk to carry away the butter and cheese.

Goat's Cheese is a Staple.

Goat's cheese, a delicatessen delicacy in the United States, is a principal article of Norwegian diet. It has the rich, brown color and something of the flavor of peanut butter. It is not eaten on crackers as a supplementary course but, sliced and laid on large cross sections of brown bread, is a staple of the local.

Characteristic of inland Norway is Lillehammer, which lies at the northern end of Mjøsen lake, Norway's largest body of fresh water. The town is a gateway to the Gudbrandsdalen. In this valley many ancient customs and costumes of the country are still in vogue. The town itself lies on the north and south rail route from Oslo to Trondhjem, and is visited annually by thousands of tourists.

This region differs markedly from the fjord country bordering the Atlantic coast and the "land of the midnight sun" which lies farther to the north. In spite of its high latitude Lillehammer enjoys a comparatively mild climate, resort hotels being open for visitors the year round.

Of supreme interest to both Norwegian and foreigner is an outdoor museum of ancient arts and crafts at the nearby village of Malhusen. Fifty hand-built farmhouses, mills, workshops and barns were purchased, moved to one community, and enriched with collections of old Norwegian handicraft. There are articles of wood, brass, leather and iron, together with examples of weaving and embroidery typical of the products of cottage handicrafts carried on by peasants of the neighborhood during long winter evenings. Here are also spinning wheels, looms and tools used before the introduction of factory goods. During tourist season provision is made to have artisans actually working at loom and forge so that memory of the country's historic peasant arts and crafts may not entirely fade from the earth.

Lillehammer, itself, while it is the metropolis of Gudbrandsdal valley, and claims more than 5,000 inhabitants, has had only a century of corporate existence.

Linda's Love Affair

By LEETE STONE

(Copyright.)

LINDA WATSON had been fed up with Brownsville ever since her personal of the first tabloid newspaper that strayed to the Brownsville post office desk. It taught her that in this poky New England village she was missing life—missing thrills; missing romance.

There was Granger Hicks, of course; the storekeeper's son, who would some day have the business, become a section man and a Baptist elder. Linda admitted she was fond of this young man, who adored her in his quiet, rural way. They went to the dances at the Town Hall; and Granger whirled her through the mazes of many square dances in vigorous, shirt-sleeved arms.

But it was all too sedate, she reflected moodily, gazing from her window one morning. Youth had more to offer, she felt. Must she wait years for Granger to find the courage to ask her to marry him—then become a humdrum Brownsville matron?

As if answering her query, a shiny-log red sport car stopped before her house, and a trim young man, possessing all the elements of dash that Linda craved, grabbed a brief case and started for the door. She hurried down to receive him.

"Well, well . . . from the sleek with a mysterious smile, 'Look who's here! Just back from Hollywood for a vacation, eh?'"

Linda commenced a comeback and a wistful smile.

"Oh, no; I'm just a small town girl. I live here . . ."

"No!" Interruption. "I don't believe it! You're too cute and pretty to have been hidden here. We'll have to do something about it, won't we?" Linda's lips curled attractively.

"What can we do?"

"Well, we can start by going to a marvelous dance tonight in Springfield. What do you say?"

Linda hesitated briefly. Rather a bold step; but then the girls she read about were all taking such chances, weren't they? Granger would be furious, and Brownsville shocked; but who cared? Not a little romance was a sea. Its waves would never wet her unless she plunged. She met the youth's glossy smile with laughing eyes.

"All right! I'll meet you in front of the Town Hall just after dark." It was darker at that end of the little street and her escapade might pass unnoticed.

That afternoon, when the dapper stranger had canvassed Brownsville in the cause of "Ice-Cold Electric Refrigerators," he dropped into the store for a package of cigarettes. Granger Hicks was behind the counter.

"Pretty sleepy little burg you got here, brother."

"Think so?" from Granger, conscious of an immediate dislike for this suave stripling.

"Can't complain, though," expansively. "I booked two orders and a date for a dance with a bunch of a girl."

"So?" Granger remembered seeing the red car in front of Linda's home that morning, and recalled the party he had witnessed from a distance between the girl he loved and this winsome one.

"Oh, boy! I know women, I do. You have to take 'em by storm; thrill 'em; tell 'em they're pretty and wonderful! Got to land 'em the old line! These strong, silent guys—take it from me, brother, they may be good to their mothers, but they're a false alarm with the women."

Granger's jolly countenance wore an unfamiliar mask of seriousness for an hour. Then he went into the back room of the store, where his elderly father was peacefully snoring. Granger shook the old man gently.

"Say, Dad," he shouted, for the old man was deaf, "do women like to be bullied?"

The question finally penetrated Hicks, Senior. Then:

"Well, son; they's times when rough talk, if you back it up, will get you more with women than anything else; but it's got to be at the right moment, boy . . . surprise 'em, an' you'll win 'em."

Granger pondered this. When the red car and its vivacious owner drew up at the dark corner of the Town Hall that evening Granger Hicks was lurking in the shadows. Soon Linda appeared at the behest of romance. The stranger sprang out and took her elbow to assist her into the chariot of thrills.

Quite suddenly a broad-shouldered giant towered over them both, as Linda's foot touched the running board. The arms of both maid and chauffeur were gripped as in a vise.

"Stranger," there was the feel of steel beneath Granger's baritone. "Run your bicycle back down the road alone, or I'll treat you to a new kind of thrill. You, Linda; I'll see to you in a moment. . . . Get going!" he urged, as romance hopped into his car and stepped on the starter.

Granger silently picked Linda up in his arms and carried her back down the dark driveway to where his worn roadster was parked. Plumping her tenderly in the seat, Granger said with the same steady note:

"Linda Watson, I'm taking you ever to Pastor Smith's."

"What for?" she gasped.

"To marry me! I've had the license some time."

And Linda went with a happy sigh.

Gold Production Not Equal to the Demand

A gold shortage is threatening the world. The peak of gold production was reached in 1916, totalling $150,000,000. Since then it has gradually dropped until last year only $115,000,000 worth was produced. No important fresh discoveries have been made in recent years and old fields are gradually being worked out. There is plenty of gold in the world for all normal purposes but so much of it is hoarded away in the form of money in banks and as jewelry by wealthy families.

India has absorbed vast quantities of the world's gold, being hoarded by its petty princes and used for dowries, bridal gifts, etc. Twice the amount of gold is being used in jewelry today as compared with 20 years ago.—Copper's Weekly.

America's Gold Producer

Ontario can still boast America's richest gold producer in its rightly famous Hollinger mine inasmuch as that mine has yielded, up to the end of 1928, gold to the value of $145,000,000. The production of so much gold has entailed the mining and the milling of 17,000,000 tons of ore. The Hollinger's present subsurface workings, if placed end to end, would reach from New York to Albany and a little beyond, a distance of nearly 150 miles, and its underground railroad system has a length of more than 91 miles.

Tar Seekers Make Trouble

Motorcycle policemen patrolled all streets near school buildings at Ventura, Calif., to halt vandalism of children beat on "improving their teeth by chewing tar." Since the report that tar-chewing builds strong teeth was accepted by the children, repeated raids have been made on the city streets. Tar has been dug from the joints of the concrete thoroughfares and the city fathers declare roadheads have been damaged by the resultant seepage of water through the cracks.

Another Einstein Theory

Prof. Einstein's theory of life, he expresses thus: "Never forget that the fruits of our work are not final to ourselves. Production is meant to enable and make our lives easier, to give our lives a touch of beauty and refinement. Never shall we allow ourselves to be degraded into mere slaves of this thing we call production."—The Atlantic Magazine.
